AT a Meeting of the SURTEES SOCIETY, held in Durham Castle on Tuesday, December 6th, 1904, the Very Reverend the Dean of Durham in the Chair—

It was ordered,

That the Register of Archbishop William Wickwane be edited for the Society by Mr. William Brown, the Secretary.

PREFACE.

The register of Archbishop William Wickwane, contained in a volume, formerly covered with a plain light parchment case, was in 1902 bound in citron coloured morocco leather by Messrs. Spottiswoode and Company, binders to the British Museum. The volume consists of 200 folios of parchment, $12 \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Of these folios 22, 23, 27-34, 41-43, 52-55, 61-65, 73, 82, 91-96, 116, and 180, are interpolations; and folios 74-77, 82d, 99, 99d, 100d, 101, 103d, 108d, 110d 111d, 112, 112d, 125, 125d, 131d, 132, 132d, 144, 144d, 153d, 155d, 156, 156d, 160d, 161, 116d, 163, 163d, 164, 165, 165d, 166d, 167, 167d, 177, 183d, 186d, 187, 187d, 199d, and 200, are blank. The volume is divided into two parts. The second part begins at page 97 and is a duplicate of the first, although differently arranged. The handwriting in both copies is the same, and the differences, most of which are given in the notes, are unimportant. The foliation which has been followed is that imposed when the volume was rebound, and will be found written in pencil in the lower left hand corner of each folio.

The editor of this volume desires to return his thanks to Mr. H. A. Hudson, Registrar of the Archbishop of York, for free access to the MS., and facility for copying it; to Mr. A. Hamilton Thompson, for much help; and to the Rev. Canon J. T. Fowler, of Durham, for copying the document giving an account of the discovery of Archbishop Wickwane's tomb, in 1669. The editor has to apologize for an unusual number of press errors.

INTRODUCTION.

Of the life of William Wickwane, who succeeded Walter Giffard as archbishop of York in 1279, very little is known prior to his elevation to that dignity. His name is spelt Wygwane (No. 673), Wykkewane (Annales Monastici (Rolls Series), iii., 281, iv., 305), Wykewane or Wikewane (Ibid., iii., 323), and Giffard's Register, 134), Wickwane (Ibid., iii., 392), Wykwan (Chronicon de Lanercost, 120), and Wykewan (Historians of the Church of York and its Archbishops (Rolls Series), ii., 407), and Wychewang (Chronicon Walteri de Hemingburgh, ii., 7). Like Thomas of Adderbury and Adam of Bibury he was one of archbishop Giffard's importations from the West Midlands into the diocese of York. The place from which he derived his name is now called Child's Wickham, a small parish in Gloucestershire, close to the borders of Worcestershire, a mile west of Broadway, about five miles south of Evesham, and the same distance west of Chipping Campden. In Domesday (edition 1793, fo. 168, col. 2) it appears as Wicvene; in the Rotuli Hundredorum (i., 170, 172) as Wykewane and Wykewan; in the Testa de Nevill (p. 80, 82), as Wykewanne, and in Pope Nicholas's Taxation (p. 223) as Wykewan. A friend, who lately visited Child's Wickham, writes:—"As to Child's Wickham, it lies about half a mile to the left of the road from Moreton-in-the-Marsh to Evesham. The turning is about a mile south-west of Broadway, and four miles from Evesham. The village is small, and stands on absolutely flat ground in the vale of Evesham; but, east of it, the Cotswolds rise to their highest point above Broadway. There is a good vicarage, but I could see no other house of any importance. The nave of the church has been rebuilt. A rather plain and early Norman west door remains, in front of which the tower, of late 14th or early 15th century work, has been built. There is a handsome spire; but the tower, like that of the neighbouring church of Church Honeybourne, or Leckhampton, near Cheltenham, is very plain, with hardly any windows. The nave has no aisles; near its east end, a very simple Norman arch, without mouldings, and springing from impost blocks, leads into a northern transeptal chapel, in the north wall of which is a narrow two-light window with a cusped circle in the head, certainly contemporary with Archbishop Wickwane and the Abbot of Winchcombe. The chancel has also been rebuilt; but there are dwarf columns about 5 feet high, in its eastern angles, from which a string-course runs westward along the north and south walls, and finishes in the abaci of two similar columns, one on each side. These seem to be old, c. 1190-1200; but the light was very bad. The arrangement is curious, and reminds me of the arrangement in the chancel at Hilton, near Yarm. There is only one monument, a small 17th century tablet high up on the wall of the transeptal chapel. The inscription was quite invisible from below, and there was no ladder about. At Broadway I saw a monument to one of the Phillippses of Middle Hill, who were lords of the manor of Child's Wickham early in 19th century."

The Wickwane family seem to have been connected with the Abbey of Winchcombe. Walter de Wykwan, possibly a brother of the archbishop, was cellarer of that house, and abbot (1282-1314). John de Wykwan, rector of Bledington, near Stow-on-the-Wold, acted as proctor for the abbey, and Master Jordan de Wicwane appears as witness to a deed about burial at Hayles and to another deed relating to Twining in Lower Kiftsgate Hundred.¹ Only one relative of the archbishop is mentioned in this register, a brother, Robert of Exeter to whom in January, 1282, the archbishop ordered 17½ marks to be paid, the residue of his salary due at Bristol (No. 819). His relations were, if not of humble rank, quite unknown in the diocese. In 1283 he was annoyed to find certain impostors of evil fame going about pretending to be relations and getting board and lodging under the pretence of being related to him (sub umbra nominis nostri). To prevent this the archbishop ordered that nothing was to be given to anyone who could not produce letters from him.²

The earliest mention of William of Wickwane is found in the register of Richard of Gravesend, bishop of Lincoln, under the archdeaconry of Buckingham, where are recorded the admission and institution at Reading, on 2 kal. Feb., 6th year (Jan. 31, 1263-4), of Master William de Wyckewane, chancellor of York, to the church of Ivingho, now Ivinghoe, in Buckinghamshire, N.E. of Tring, on the presentation of the bishop of Winchester, vacant by the resignation of Master Suicard, the last rector, an inquisition having been taken thereon by M(atthew) de Stratton, the archdeacon of Buckingham.¹ The bishop of Winchester who presented Wickwane was John de Exonia or Oxonia,² or Gernsey, who before his consecration in 1262, had been chancellor of York. Robert of Scarborough, afterwards dean of York, is said to have been possessed of this dignity in 1262, and Wickwane in 1263.³ The exact date of his appointment as chancellor is uncertain, as the register of archbishop Godfrey de Ludham (1258-1264) has not been preserved.⁴ He occurs as chancellor in November, 1267.⁵ He does not appear to have figured very prominently during the primacy of Archbishop Giffard. He claimed the prebends of Newbald against Cardinal Ancherus,⁶ and there is an undated letter⁷ from him to his diocesan, complaining in somewhat querulous terms that he had been robbed of certain fees due to him as chancellor.

On April 28, 1279, three days after the death of Archbishop Giffard,⁸ the king committed the custody of the see, during the vacancy, to Thomas de Normanville and Master Henry of Newark, who was afterwards archbishop.⁹ The election took place on St. Alban's day (June 22),¹⁰ when ¹ He was succeeded as archdeacon in 1268 by Percival de Lavannia, whose name occurs not infrequently in this register.

² In the list of the chancellors of York (Le Neve's Fasti iii., 163) he is called John de Excestria, so it seems he came from Exeter, not Oxford. Could he have been a relative of the archbishop?

³ Le Neve's Fasti iii., 163.

⁴ In Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum (v. 341) two documents, relating to the appropriation of the churches of Beckermert and Arlecdon, in Cumberland, to the abbey of Calder both dated in 1262, are said to come from the register of archbishop Godfrey ii., 180 and iii., 1. This is quite inexplicable. It is not likely that Ludham's register ever extended to three parts, as he held office only for six years, and no other archbishop ever had more than two parts to his register. I am indebted to the Rev. James Wilson, Dalston Vicarage, Cumberland, for bringing this under my notice. Dugdale in his Antiquities of Warwickshire refers several times to Bishop Molend's Register at Lichfield, which no longer exists. The references are equally circumstantial and not very probable.

eighteen votes were given to Wickwane, and single votes were cast by him for Master Hugh of Evesham, afterwards cardinal of San Lorenzo in Lucina, by Master Robert of Scarborough, archdeacon of the East Riding and afterwards dean of York, for Master Thomas de Wythen, archdeacon of York, and by Master Thomas of Hedon for Master Thomas of Corbridge, a brother canon, and later on archbishop. Ultimately Wickwane was unanimously chosen.¹ On July 4 the king signified to the pope his assent to the election.² On his arrival at Viterbo, whither he had gone for consecration, Pope Nicholas III. referred the question of the validity of his election to a bishop whose see has not been identified,³ and to G., cardinal priest of St. Mark, and Matthew, cardinal deacon of Sta Maria in Porticu. On their report the election was quashed, apparently for some defect in procedure,⁴ which was remedied by the pope, who himself appointed Wickwane, so that the see should not remain vacant longer than was absolutely necessary. The date of the document (No. 740) is September 19, 1279, and Stubbs, who very possibly got his information from Wickwane's Register, says the archbishop was consecrated on this day. Certain entries⁵ however in this register show that this event must have taken place a couple of days earlier, on 15 kal. Oct. (Sept. 17). Of his journey across Europe there is no record, but with his arrival in England his troubles commenced. A claim had long been made by the archbishops of York to have their cross carried before them as a mark of their primacy, whilst travelling through the province of Canterbury, a pretension which had always been strenuously resisted by the southern primate. The pope, who had foreseen this trouble, had besought John Peckham, the archbishop of Canterbury, in a private letter (littera clausa), not to enter into a contest as to the right of the archbishop of election to the see of Durham because "non fuit facta communiter ab omnibus, sed singulariter a singulis; et ideo non per inspirationem." Does this throw any light on the objection to Wickwane's election?

⁵ See No. 249, dated Sept. 16, which is the last entry in one of the archbishop's episcopal years, and No. 393, dated Sept. 17, which commences a year.

York to carry his cross erect in the southern province, and commended Wickwane to his notice, as coming to his see with the pope's benediction.¹ The appeal had little influence with the archbishop of Canterbury. Wickwane, after crossing the Channel, carrying his cross erect in the mid passage, where the province of Canterbury presumably began, proceeded in the same manner through the diocese.² All went quietly till he got to Rochester, when Master Adam de Hales, the official of the archbishop of Canterbury, and his fellows, stopped him and broke the cross. The archbishop, however, very soon caused another one to be erected, and proceeded on his way to London. On his arrival at the capital he found a large force of armed men awaiting him ; and if it had not been for the assistance of numerous friends who came to meet him, he would not have been able to go and pay fealty to the king for the temporalities of his see.³ Not content with these insults, the archbishop of Canterbury subjected all places through which the northern primate should pass with his cross erect to an interdict, and forbade any one to have dealings with him. This excommunication was ordered to be published in the villages between London and Royston (No. 586), so as to give Wickwane as much annoyance as possible whilst travelling home along the North Road. The interdict does not seem to have impeded his progress, as he was able to travel from London to Royston in one day,⁴ reaching Scrooby on Oct. 7, and York on the 14th. His enthronement took place on Christmas Day, 1279, when extensive preparations were made to celebrate that event.⁵

² See Letters from Northern Registers, 59-63, Nos. 463 and 586, and Annales Monastici iv., 281. Wickwane's injunctions to his clergy and religious to use the York Use is probably due to his wish to maintain the independence of the Northern Province (Nos. 256, 724). It was doubtless owing to the same jealousy of encroachment that, during the long interregnum after archbishop Rogers' death, the dean of York petitioned Clement III. to order the observance of the York use throughout the diocese (Historians of the Church of York iii., 85, 86).

Henry de Newerk, keepers of the archbishopric, to restore the temporalities (Cal. of Patent Rolls (1272-1281), p. 329). Some time in 1279, probably on this occasion, archbishop Peckham promised the king he would abstain from interdicting the sale of victuals to the archbishop of York when coming to the king (Cal. of Close Rolls (1272-1279), p. 582). This undertaking did not prevent Peckham from acting in the same way to Wickwane's successor, John Romanus, in 1286 (No. 929). See also No. 929.

The new archbishop was in every respect a great contrast to his predecessor.¹ Giffard had been a man of stately presence, and a lover of company and good cheer, and yet chaste as well, though rendered somewhat weak and fretful by excessive corpulence. Wickwane was the very opposite, meagre, austere, and frugal, yet, as the Lanercost chronicler somewhat grudgingly admits, as far as could be seen from outward appearance, a holy man and one with a very tender conscience.

His stern, unbending nature, which led him to insist upon his rights to their fullest extent, caused him many troubles. Besides the dispute with Canterbury there was another with his suffragan, the powerful bishop of Durham, which was rendered more acute by his unwise conduct. The bishops of Durham had always resisted, or at least evaded, visitations by their metropolitan at York. Archbishop Giffard, by the exercise of a good deal of tact, had been able to make a visitation of the prior and chapter of Durham, but only in a very qualified way.² This method of procedure did not satisfy Wickwane. When he had been in office rather more than a year, he gave notice that he intended to hold a metropolitanical visitation of the diocese of Durham on the morrow of St. John the Baptist's day (June 25), 1281.³ Appeals were at once made against the intended visitation by the bishop on the ground of partiality, as suits were depending between him and the archbishop, and on the further grounds that none of his predecessors had ever exercised such right of visitation, and that before doing so he must, according to a constitution of Innocent IV., first visit his own chapter at York which he had neglected to do. The grounds of appeal by the prior and convent of Durham were very similar. They alleged in addition, as shewing prejudice, the refusal of the archbishop to institute Master Adam of Barnby, their nominee, to the living of West Rounton, and his encroachments upon their jurisdiction in Howdenshire

¹Sub anno 1279. Obiit Eboracensis archiepiscopus, Walterus, formosus clericus, castus, socialis, et dapsilis, sed ob pinguetudinem morosior et debilior, cui successit Willelmus de Wycheham é contra macilentus, asper, et parcus, sed utique iudicio quo afforis possit agnosci sanctus et consciencie and Allertonshire.¹ The archbishop paid no attention to these remonstrances, and notwithstanding an appeal from the king on behalf of the prior and convent,² proceeded northward to hold the visitation. He reached Sherburn, near Durham, on June 24, when he ordered Barnby to be instituted,³ and thus did away with one of the causes of appeal. On his entry into the city he was courteously met by the prior, who took him to his house, where he was entertained in a very splendid manner and received handsome presents, with the object, however, of inducing him to refrain from his visitation.⁴ The archbishop could not be persuaded to forego any of his rights, but endeavoured to get into the churchyard with the idea of entering the cathedral by the north door. He was, however, driven back by a crowd of knights from different parts of the bishopric. The archbishop was in no wise daunted, but, standing in the open space in front of the cathedral, now known as the Palace Green, clothed in his canonicals, after a weighty address to the bystanders, he fulminated a solemn excommunication against the bishop, prior, and chapter, and all others impeding his visitation.⁵ The excommunication seems to have had no effect, and been a mere brutum fulmen. Divers law proceedings took place, and ultimately in Jan., 1283-4, the sentence of excommunication was revoked by the prior of Barnwell, the archdeacon of Northampton, and the chamberlain of the monastery of Bury St. Edmunds, sitting at the Church of All Saints, Northampton as papal delegates.⁶

²*Scriptores Tres*, 56. Giffard's visitation at Durham was almost exactly on the same lines as the visitation of the dean and chapter of York, agreed upon by archbishop Romanus in 1290 (Hist. Ch. York iii., 216-220).

After the death of bishop Robert de Insula on June 7, 1283, the archbishop again tried to effect a visitation at Durham. This time, in consequence of the vacancy of the see, the opposition was led by the prior and convent. On

⁵ Scriptores Tres, p. 60, and Nos. 454 and 455. This excommunication was to be published in the dioceses of Carlisle and Whithorn, and Lincoln, because the prior of Durham had a cell at Stamford in the last diocese (No. 456). It was to be published in the churches in Howdenshire and Allertonshire in Yorkshire, of which the prior and convent of Durham were the patrons (No. 459). The text of his discourse was "Descendi ut viderem Judæam et Jerusalem" (Chronicon Walteri de Hemingburgh ii., 7). There seems to be no such passage in the Vulgate. Perhaps the archbishop invented it in order to expound it allegorically. Jerusalem and Durham are remarkably alike in both being what Freeman called "peninsular strongholds," though there is very little water in the ravines or valleys around Jerusalem.

the arrival of the archbishop on July 3 he was not allowed to enter the cathedral, but had to go to St. Nicholas Church, where he proposed to excommunicate the prior and chief men in the chapter. This so irritated certain young men in the town that they cut off one of the ears of his horse, and, but for the intervention of Wiscard de Charron and Peter de Thoresby would, as was believed, have killed him. He was glad to escape by a secret way down some steps to the schools and along the Wear to Kepier.¹

This second affray much exasperated the archbishop against the see of Durham, just at a time when his services were very necessary. Anthony Bek, who had been archdeacon of Durham and canon of Ripon and Southwell, as well as mediator between Wickwane and bishop Insula, was elected bishop of Durham on July 9, 1281,² and had the temporalities restored to him on Sept. 4.³ The difficulty was to persuade the archbishop to consecrate his new suffragan. With the object of conciliating him, Bek, who was a very wealthy man, undertook to pay all the expenses connected with the translation of the remains of St. William from the mean position they had occupied in York Minster to a shrine worthy of them.⁴ This generosity on Bek's part to the mother church of the province, coupled with the pressing solicitation of the king, overcame the archbishop's reluctance. The translation and consecration took place on the same day, the fifth of the ides of January (Jan. 9), 1283-4, in York Minster, in the presence of the king and queen and many of the chief men of the country.⁵ Although the archbishop had been prevailed upon to consecrate Bek, his feelings against the prior and convent of Durham remained as bitter as ever. On the day following Bek's consecration

See also No 723. Hemingburgh (Chronicon ii., 14) says the shrine was made of silver and gold. Bek's brother, Thomas, bishop of St. David's, who had been consecrated by Wickwane (Annales Monastici (Rolls Series) iv., 478), had defrayed the cost of the translation of St. Hugh of Lincoln (Historians of the Church of York ii., 407), which had taken place on Oct. 6, 1281 (Chronicon Walteri de Hemingburgh ii., 8).

⁵This date is confirmed by the archbishop (No. 723), who says the translation was to take place on the Sunday after the Epiphany, which in 1283-4 fell on Jan. 9. See also Chronicon de Lanercost, p. 113. Robert de Graystones (Tres Scriptores, p. 64) says it was on Sunday near Christmas.

he endeavoured to make him excommunicate them, but Bek would in no wise agree, objecting that he had been consecrated their bishop the day before and could not be expected to excommunicate them the day following.¹ To his latest hour Wickwane regretted that he had ever agreed to consecrate Bek.² It was not till a year later he issued a mandate to the archdeacon of York to enthrone Bek in his cathedral.³

Besides his quarrels with Canterbury and Durham the archbishop was not without troubles in his own diocese. At Beverley, where he was the chief lord, there was a dispute between him and the burgesses about common of pasture (No. 605). An appeal from the Beverley people for help to Canterbury was promptly answered by a sentence of excommunication (No. 47); and it was only after some of the more prominent of his opponents had undergone penance in St. John's, Beverley, and York Minster (No. 49), that an agreement was come to (No. 708).

Wickwane was accused of oppressing those under his sway, and Cardinal Hugh of Evesham,⁴ whom Wickwane had wished to make archbishop of York, thought these complaints were not without foundation (Nos. 480, 483). As regards exactions and oppressions by his officers, the archbishop certainly had done his best to restrain them. The apparitor of the Court of Christianity at York was removed for extortion (No. 505)⁵, and his official was rebuked for partiality in exercise of his office (No. 513). That such rebukes were not unnecessary is shewn by the petition from the clergy of the deanery of Holderness (No. 606), who alleged that the official of the archdeacon of the East Riding, by his exactions, had milked the church dry in that district;

³ Le Neve (Fasti iii., 288) says the document is in Wickwane's Register, but there is nothing like it, or of so late a date, in the Register in its present state. The document in question is dated at Pontoyse, 7 kal. Marcii, anno 6 (Feb. 23, 1284-5). The date is probably correct, as Robert de Graystones (Scriptores Tres, 69) says Bek was enthroned in Durham Cathedral on the eve of the Nativity, 1285; and, although he gives the wrong year letter, A instead of G, Monday, the day of the week, is correct. The date is interesting as it occurs in the latest document known to have been executed by Wickwane.

⁴ The archbishop in a letter written in 1281 gives the cardinal a mysterious warning about not permitting any decoctions or electuaries to be made in his house lest any accident should happen (No. 474). The cardinal was a noted physician. Could the warning have been due to Wickwane's anxiety lest his friend should be accused of poisoning some one? It was a very disturbed time, in which doubtless many mysterious deaths occurred.

not content as his predecessors had been with three or four conveyances, with the local dean and his clerk, he came to hold the chapters of the rural deaneries with a superfluity of conveyances, bringing with him a friend, the rural dean and his clerk, the archbishop's sequestrator, and an apparitor, so that the clergy were oppressed like the children of Israel under Pharaoh. Another example of his care for his clergy appears by his refusal to accept the subsidy to be paid to him by his clergy, except from those who would pay willingly (No. 524).

He had other quarrels besides those mentioned above. The prior and convent of Carlisle, whom he had believed to be friendly to him, got him excommunicated (No. 699)¹, and in some way, not explained, he got into hot water with the collectors of the Tenth for the relief of the Holy Land, and was obliged to make a very humble apology, which he did in very grudging terms (Nos. 695, 928).²

If the archbishop was stern and unyielding he certainly did not spare himself. This register shews how zealously he discharged his duty as a bishop. Of the religious houses in his diocese he visited in the spring of 1280, in person or by deputy, twenty-three and a hospital, St. Giles, Beverley. The monasteries visited were Selby, Sinningthwaite, St. Mary's, York, Nostell, Warter, Whitby, Marton, Moxby, Newburgh, Guisbrough, Bridlington, Kirkham, Healaugh Park, Bolton, Drax, Monk Bretton, Nun Appleton, Worksop, Newstead, Shelford, Blyth, Cartmel, and Conishead. At St. Mary's, York, Nostell, Warter, and Whitby, all was well (p. 137*n*). At Selby (No. 75), Thomas of Whalley, the abbot appointed by Archbishop Giffard in 1270,³ was a failure. He wasted the property of the house, was immoral, violent, and resorted to a wizard for help to find the body of his brother who had been drowned in the Ouse (No. 75). As nothing is said about the monks of that house it is probable their morals had greatly improved since the visitation in 1275,⁴ when so many of them were accused of immorality. This improvement was general. Only in three cases,

¹ The prior of Durham, who had been appointed by the pope judge in the cause between the prior and chapter of Carlisle and Geoffrey Laurence and others, had caused his commissary, the succentor of Durham, to excommunicate the archbishop (Scriptores Tres, 66).

² The purchase of jewels and New Year's gifts in 1282 for the lord of Dublin and Master Ardicio, the collectors of this subsidy, was probably made for the purpose of healing this quarrel (No. 820).¹

³ Giffard's Register, p. 217.

⁴ Ibid., p. 324.

Newburgh, Healaugh Park, and Cartmel (Nos. 184, 427, 440), was a warning against the presence of women in the house necessary, a special exception being made at Newburgh in favour of the patron's wife, who was to be allowed to stay one night. The corrections made by the archbishop after the visitations are most of them after the same pattern, and are very practical. Take as an example the visitation of Bolton Priory, which is the longest (No. 428). After an exhortation to love and good behaviour the archbishop proceeds to give directions for the proper management of the monastic estates. Here, as in nearly every other case, he attempts to prevent the growth of private property, by ordering the locks on the carols and chests to be broken open. Then follow rules for good behaviour, such as not going outside, confessing, not eating or drinking after compline or other improper times, for silence, and repair of ruinous buildings. At Newburgh and Bridlington (Nos. 184, 302) it was necessary to reprove the sporting tastes of the canons, whilst at Kirkham and Bolton (Nos. 303, 428) divine service, especially the chanting, was badly conducted. Great attention seems to have been bestowed on the music, as we find a prior of Warter providing a fund for the purchase of spices to be given as a reward for improvement by the canons of his house in singing the psalms. He laid great stress on long pauses being made in the middle of each verse.¹ Many of the houses suffered from poverty. At Bridlington (No. 317) the dorter and offices were so small the archbishop forbade the reception of any more inmates till after his visitation. At Bolton (No. 428) the church, chapter-house, and buildings were on the point of falling down, and at Healaugh Park (No. 520) the house was so poor that the archbishop besought his official to make his charges for confirming the election of the new prior as light as possible. In the case of the smaller houses, such as Hampole, Yedingham, and Moxby (Nos. 164, 188, 443), to save expense, the visitation or care of the monastery was not exercised by the archbishop in person, but by a deputy.

¹ "Psalmozantes pausas longiores in medio cujuslibet versus" (No. 306). A friend remarks: "I believe that the great feature of the Solesmes revival of plainsong is the long pause in the middle of the verse.

I remember being much struck by the effect of this when hearing convent sing vespers at Maria-Laach five years ago." Prior Wheldrake's resignation is noticed in No. 342.

Marton Priory, a small house of Austin Canons in the forest of Galtres, affords an example of how temporal calamities brought about spiritual degradation. Here the reformation of the house was entrusted to the prior of Newburgh, another house of the same order, who was requested to send three of the inmates of his house to Marton who by their good manner of life should restore its fallen fortunes (No. 444). One of the canons at Marton was so violent and unbearable, it being impossible to find locks of sufficient strength to bind him, that the General Chapter of the Order was commanded to send him to a place of safe custody (No. 445).

The unsatisfactory condition of his clergy caused the archbishop a great deal of anxiety. Very soon after his arrival in his diocese he issued a mandate (No. 61), requiring all the rectors and vicars in his diocese, and others having cures of souls, to be ordained to such orders as their cure required. This seems to have been only imperfectly obeyed. If the institutions for the first year of his pontificate in the important archdeaconries of York and Nottingham are tabulated, it will be found that in the former there were one subdeacon, 5 deacons, 3 priests, and one unspecified, and in the latter 4 subdeacons, 2 deacons, 4 priests, and 4 unspecified. Wickwane certainly strove to improve the condition of affairs. At Hemsworth (No. 60), he required the presentee to be ordained a priest, and removed the parson at Rampton (No. 212) for not having become one. Even in the case of a man of such importance as Baldwin Wake (No. 314), he refused to institute his presentee to Scrayingham as he had not been ordained a priest. Examples of the presentation of clergy in minor orders by religious persons are not wanting. The archbishop himself collated both a subdeacon and a deacon (Nos. 345, 361), and a deacon was provided by the pope (No. 420). It was in consequence of the ignorance and youth of so many of the presentees to livings that so many licences for study had to be granted. These were so numerous that there are special sections, entitled "Licencia" (see pp. 38, 84, 115, 129). The licensee had the option of studying in England or abroad, "citra mare vel ultra" (No. 39), but in one case (No. 204) Paris is specifically mentioned as the place of study.

Non-residence was another question which early engaged the archbishop's attention (No. 496). This matter, as well as plurality and orders, formed part of the inquiries always made at visitations (No. 382). Where possible, the presentee was compelled to resign any other living (Nos. 80, 187, 322, 348), unless he could shew a dispensation allowing him to retain it (No. 213). From two commissions to inquire into the subject of plurality (Nos. 316, 639), it would appear that many dispensations permitting non-residence were issued by the pope. A striking instance of Wickwane's determination to prevent improper persons being thrust into his diocese is afforded by No. 629, where he tells Lewis of Savoy that in spite of the application of the king, whose relation he was, he would not allow him to exchange the prebend he held in York Minster for another in a more convenient place. Against Wickwane's action with regard to Lewis of Savoy may fairly be placed his obsequious conduct on behalf of Napoleone (No. 464), probably a member of the Orsini. Nicholas III. was a member of the same family, so that the compliment to Napoleone was directly addressed to the pope. Giordano, through whom it was transmitted, was one of the Orsini cardinals who were imprisoned by the people of Viterbo in the conclave of 1281. (Gregorovius Gesch. Stadt Rom, Eng. Trans., v. p. 492).

There is little doubt that the form of inquisition, taken on the vacancy of a living (No. 555), was the same as in the time of Archbishop Giffard, in whose register there are many examples, but there is only one specimen in this register, that taken on the occasion of the vacancy of Weston in Nottinghamshire (No. 217). Criminous clerks were another source of trouble. As many persons took minor orders with the object of protecting themselves under the privileges thereby conferred, criminous clerks were not uncommon. One of these privileges was that persons in holy orders could only be tried in ecclesiastical courts, so when the justices itinerant came to try criminal cases, commissaries from the ordinary appeared to claim any clerics who might be put on their trial (Nos. 42, 200). Two conversi of Rufford Abbey were delivered by such commissaries from secular judges and handed over to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction (No. 234). The archbishop was keenly alive to the danger of persons leading a scandalous and vagabond life under the shelter of this privilege, and thus bringing discredit on the clerical character. To obviate this danger he ordained that, unless these clerks should attend school, they were not to look to him for help in their troubles (No. 741). On the other hand the archbishop sternly avenged any infringement of their privileges, as Robert de Berley (No. 122) found to his cost, who, in his capacity as king's bailiff, had executed certain clerks for robbery and other evil deeds.¹

Cases of immorality, whether by clerks (Nos. 216, 310, 402) or laymen, were sternly punished. Penances, not mere money fines (Nos. 201, 203), were required of the penitents. A person of wealth and importance, like Simon Constable of Burton Constable, in Holderness, and Katherine of Weelsby, widow of John of Danthorpe, whom she was accused of having poisoned,² were forced to submit themselves to ecclesiastical censure for supposed immorality (Nos. 312, 340, 512), which seems to have been atoned for by a subsequent marriage (No. 707).

The Register gives a very clear idea of the way Wickwane discharged his duty as diocesan. The itinerary at the end of the volume shews his restless activity in visiting all parts of his diocese, though his movements were a good deal controlled by the necessity of frequently staying at his own manors, as Scrooby, Cawood, Bishopthorpe, Bishop Burton, and Bishop Wilton, where he was certain of finding board and lodging ready for him. Unlike Archbishop Giffard, he never left his province³ from his entry in November, 1279, till the autumn of 1284, when he left it never to return. His duties were of a very miscellaneous nature. Caring for a recluse near Blyth (No. 235), who was poor and in bad health, and making inquiries about a nun of Nunburnholme (No. 308), who professed a desire to enter a stricter rule, and an order to the parishioners of Bilton-in-the-Ainsty to observe the anniversary of the dedication of their church, are examples. The Crusades, which had engaged a great deal of Archbishop Giffard's attention, are only mentioned in one document (No. 467). With a view of providing a resident clergy, vicarages were instituted at Birstall, Blyth, Mattersey, Sheriff Hutton, Silkstone, Walkeringham, and Whenby. The old quarrel, begun in Giffard's time, about where the document occurs the place is written Lond', as if for London, though the scribe may have meant to write Loudham, now Lowdham, a village near Nottingham, in which county the archbishop was staying from May 26 till July 4 in that year.

³ There is one possible exception, a visit to London at the end of May, 1280 (p. 344). In both folios

the right of Bogo de Clare to the church of Adlingfleet, claimed by Master Robert of Scarborough, dragged on (Nos. 593, 627). Besides his canonry of York (No. 2), he obtained possession of the church of Settrington, on the presentation of Roger Bigod, earl of Norfolk, though with a proviso he should be ordained priest within a year (No. 372). He long remained an annoyance and a source of trouble in the diocese, and No. 718 gives a recital of his misdeeds in the church of York, apparently as treasurer,¹ at a later period. Richard de Vescy was another scandalous parson whom the archbishop endeavoured to eject from his living. Vescy had been presented to North Ferriby by Lady Agnes de Vescy in 1272¹, but for some reason he fell under Wickwane's censure and was excommunicated (No. 320). Master William of Cliff had been admitted in his place (No. 328), but his entry was forcibly resisted by Vescy and his accomplices, including his son Reginald (No. 329). He did not hesitate to fortify the church, and displayed great violence in expelling the lawful rector (No. 654). Ultimately some arrangement must have been come to, as William de Monceus and Thomas de Romenale were successively instituted to the church of North Ferriby on the presentation of Agnes de Vescy in the spring of 1282 (Nos. 364, 367). Probably Vescy was induced to resign Ferriby by a promise of Escrick, of which he obtained possession in July, 1282 (No. 411). He had already been instituted rector of Escrick under a dispensation for illegitimacy (No. 186), but the living had been sequestrated and he excommunicated (No. 393), and the church declared vacant (No. 730). From this last document it appears he also passed under the name of Kesham.

The items in the accounts near the end of the volume give some small insight into the archbishop's character, and shew him in a milder aspect. He had sporting tastes and got his dogs, couchers, setters, from Normandy (No. 652). When he got them he made provisions both for them and their keeper (Nos. 660, 791). His wine came through Hull (No. 779), and was purchased from Hamund Box,³ a great merchant there and in London (No. 823). He spent considerable sums on plate and jewels, 20 marks for a couple of pitchers (No. 837), and as much as 74li 7s 4d at one time on jewels (No. 878). St. Ives in Huntingdonshire and Boston were the two fairs at which purchases were made. Wickwane conferred one great benefit on the see of York by the gift of a large head of stock, 602 oxen, 54 horses, and 1,000 sheep, to be kept on the lands of the see, with a proviso that it should be handed on intact by each succeeding archbishop (No. 719).

Full as this register is compared with that of Archbishop Giffard, it by no means records all his activity. Stubbs¹ tells us that Wickwane devoted especial care to see that all the churches in his diocese were duly dedicated. The dedication of only two churches, Loweswater and Lancaster (Nos. 386, 391), both situated in the archdeaconry of Richmond, is mentioned, although there must have been many undedicated churches, as one of the questions at visitations was whether there were any such churches in the archdeaconry (No. 382). From other sources² we know that Wickwane dedicated the parish church of Sheffield about 1286, and the abbey church of St. Mary, York, and the parish church of Gilling-in-Ryedale in 1283, but of this nothing is said in the register.

The archbishop as early as the winter of 1282 was hoping to go to Rome, but was prevented by business (No. 922). As time went on this desire grew stronger. No doubt the labours and worries of his office, and the dispute with Durham, told upon him, although in some few cases he was able to ease himself by the employment of Scotch bishops³ to perform some of his duties. In the summer of 1284 he was able to make arrangements for leaving England. On May 31 in that year he had letters of protection from the king to last three years,⁴ and on June 25 he nominated Master Robert of Tadcaster and Hugh of Stapleford as his attorneys to represent him whilst abroad.⁵ The exact date of his departure from England is uncertain, or whether he ever reached Rome.¹ Archbishop Peckham heard in December, 1284, that Wickwane was then at Pontigny, and gave orders that he was to be prevented carrying his cross erect through the province of Canterbury as he was expected to attempt before long.² Pontigny, a Cistercian Abbey, north of Auxerre, in Burgundy, was one of the earliest off-shoots of Citeaux. The sojourn there of Thomas Becket after his quarrel with Henry II. about the constitutions of Clarendon, and the tomb of St. Edmund Rich of Canterbury,³ who had died in 1240 at Soisy-en-Brie, close by, had made the place holy for Englishmen. The only information we have of his movements in 1285 is that he dated a document at Pontoise, north of Paris, on Feb. 23.⁴ He certainly returned to Pontigny, where he was seized with a mortal illness,⁵ according to the Lanercost Chronicler,⁶ a fever. The date of his death was the 26th or 27th of August, 1285.⁷ His obsequies ¹The Dunstaple chronicler Annales Monastici iii. (323), says his death took place at Pontigny on the way to Rome, which is confirmed by the Lanercost writer (Chronicon de Lanercost, 122).

²*Letters of Archbishop Peckham* (Rolls Series), iii., 869. There was a similar order issued on April 12, 1285, when Wickwane was expected to land from France somewhere in the diocese of Chichester (Ibid., p. 893).

³The shrine of St. Edmund, an 18th century piece of work, is still above the high altar at Pontigny with the greater portion of the saint presumably still in it. There are two pictures of it in F. Bond's English Gothic Architecture (1905), p. 187, and another in J. C. Wall's Shrines of English Saints. His arm is still preserved in the crypt at Vézelay. The parish church at Sedgfield, near Stockton, and a chapel at Gateshead shew that St. Edmund was revered in the north of England. At Gateshead there was a hospital dedicated to St. Edmund the king as well as one to St. Edmund the bishop. See Script. Tres, p. cccciv., and Knowles and Boyle's Vestiges of Old Newcastle and Gateshead, p. 296. On Oct. 12, 1285, the king ordered the sheriff of Kent to pay to the abbot and convent of Pontigny twenty marks yearly out of the farm of the city of Canterbury to maintain four candles in the church of Pontigny, burning round the tomb of St. Edmund the Confessor, pursuant to the charter of Henry iii., which the king has inspected (Calendar of Patent Rolls (1281-1292) p. 196).

⁷*Historians of the Church of York* ii., 408. The later day is given in the Cott. MS. Vitell. A ii., fo. iiiid. Thomas Wykes (Annales Monastici) iv. 305) says about Whit Sunday which fell on May 13 in 1285. In September, 1285, Otto de Grandisono was appointed, during pleasure, to the custody of the archbishopric of York, then void, on condition that he applied the issues to the construction of castles in Wales (Calendar of Patent Rolls (1281-1292), p. 193. On Sept. 22, were celebrated with all the pomp due to his rank and character. He was buried in a lead coffin in the presbytery under a brass, which was destroyed by the Huguenots in the sixteenth century, with an inscription on a sheet of lead "Hic jacet Guillermus Eboracensis Archiepiscopus Angliæ Primas." When his coffin was discovered in 1669, during some alterations in the pavement of the presbytery, besides the above mentioned sheet of lead there were found a small chalice and paten, silver gilt, a cross of copper gilt, a ring of gold, still on the bones of his thumb, on which was engraved Ave Maria gracia plena, and around the head small leaves, silver gilt, which had been ornaments for the mitre.¹ After his death he was looked on as a Saint, and many miracles were reported to have been worked at his tomb.² In cases of fever³ he was reported to be especially useful.⁴ It is very likely that in consequence of his repute as a Saint that not long after his death Roger of Malton and Hugh of Methley obtained leave from Archbishop Romanus to go on pilgrimage to Pontigny, where they would have an opportunity of making their prayers at his tomb (No. 911). Bale,⁵ on the authority of a certain Nicholas Brigham, "Latinæ linguæ interpres eruditus, in venationibus rerum memorabilium," states that he was author amongst other works of a book called "Memoriale, opus variis doctrinarum generibus reffectum."

The following is the description of Archbishop Wickwane's seal, a sulphur cast, from the Catalogue of Seals in the British Museum (I. 369):—"Pointed oval, $3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{8}$ ins. The archbishop, on a carved corbel, with embroidered vestments, full length, lifting up the right hand in benediction and in the left hand a crozier. Overhead, a trefoiled arch, the king granted licence to the dean and chapter of St. Peter's, York, to elect an archbishop on petition, presented by Mr. Thomas, archdeacon of Cleveland, and Thomas de Hedon, canons thereof, bringing news of the death of William, late archbishop (Ibid., p. 194).

⁴Thomas Fuller in his Church History (lib. iii., s. vi., par. 14) says, "William Wickwane, archbishop of York, accounted a great scholar, author of a book called Memoriale, and esteemed a petty Saint in that age." He is mentioned in connection with the Statute of Mortmain, which Fuller says he had a hand in passing. He cannot have had much to do with it, as the Parliament, which passed it, sat at Michaelmas, 1279, before his return from abroad.

P. 318, l. 19. Wrlin, in the diocese of Hereford, is probably Worthen, Cherbury Hundred, Salop, and in the old deanery of Pontesbury, Ludlow archdeaconry, S. W. of Shrewsbury. It is not far south of Alberbury (so spelt in Pope Nicholas's Taxation), and is now in Montgomery deanery. A possible alternative is Eardisland, Stretford Hundred, in Herefordshire, and Leominster deanery, Hereford archdeaconry. This takes the form Erleslen' in Pope Nicholas's Taxation, and becomes Erislonde in the Valor Ecclesiasticus. The name was evidently only known orally to Wickwane and his registry.

P. 339, side note. Blidworth is between Southwell and Mansfield, not far from Newstead Abbey, which is in the parish of Blidworth. The land between Blidworth and Rufford is still forest-land, and there is a regular crop of Robin Hood legends which have their centre at Blidworth. The hundreds of Broxtow, Thurgarton, and Calverton, are all in the neighbourhood of Blidworth. Rayngwath, now Rainworth, is $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles east of Blidworth.

P. 341 No. 933. Byssemede, now Bushmead, near St. Neots (Hunts.), but itself over the Bedfordshire border, was a prior of Black Canons. The site of the house of the Preaching Friars at Cambridge is occupied by Emmanuel College.

P. 343, col. 2. April 28, May 1, 1280. Holm is probably Holme-on-Spalding Moor, near Market Weighton, and Neusum, Newsholme, in the parish of Wressle, two miles N. W. of Howden.

P. 345. May 19, 1281. This was Monday before Ascension Day, and had been appointed by the archbishop (No. 383) for his visitation of Coupland deanery at Waberthwaite and Muncaster. It looks as if this could have been held more conveniently between the 3rd and the 10th; but it would have been quite possible for him to have left Hornby on the 17th or 18th, have got through his visitation early on the Monday, and returned to Hornby along Morecambe Bay in the afternoon and evening. It would have been a longish journey; but, tide allowing for the passage of the Duddon or the Kent, quite possible on a long May day. May not the length of daylight also allow for Grenton (June 19) being Grinton in Swaledale?

25. 2 non. Aug., etc. (Aug. 4, 1281). Alwentone. W., etc., dilectis in Christo filiis, dominis R., decano, et capitulo Eboracensi, salutem, etc. Ecclesie nostre dignitatem augere cupientes jugiter et honorem, ea que statum ejus principaliter contingere cernimus, vestro communicato consilio tractare disponimus et debemus. Ecce, igitur, conferente nuper nobiscum dilecto in Christo filio, magistro W. de Corner', fratre et concanonico vestro, inter cetera duxerat suggerendum quod Ebor. et Dunelm. ecclesiis, quibus mutuo obligatur, propter turbaciones et commociones animorum, que pretextu litis se ingerunt inchoate, visceralibus compaciens affectibus et supremis, circa formam aliquam procurandam ad perpetuam utriusque ecclesie quietem, gratum laborem sibi libenter assumeret et devotum; hanc quidem formam subiciens protinus et pretendens, quam procurare credit, verius prout asserit, et firmare; videlicet quod Dunelm. Eboracenses archiepiscopos in metropolitice visitacionibus, episcopus, scilicet, primo die, secundo vero capitulum, admittant cum debita reverencia et procurent, proponatque archiepiscopus in capitulo verbum Dei; et, si quid episcopum vel capitulum communiter vel singulariter contingat, quod correccionem desideret vel requirat, et quivis in communi vel drivatim id visitanti exponat, visitans ipse absque scrutinio et singulari examinacione, ut consuevit fieri, personarum, que corrigenda fuerint corrigat et reformet. Idemque visitandi modus per loca collegiata et decanatus tocius diocesis in clero et in populo per omnia observetur; hoc adjecto, ut in ingressu visitacionis cujuslibet precipiat visitans ipse, sub pena excommunicacionis quam contra proferat non parentes, quod quilibet subditorum¹ quicquid corrigendum in capite noverit et in membris edicat communiter vel secreto; et ad talem denunciacionem visitans episcopo injungat quod, infra certum tempus prefigendum, talia corrigat competenter; alioquin extunc metropolitanus id faciat suo jure. Nos, vero, cogitantes sic de formula, excitati pro bono pacis, liti cederemus forsitan si annueritis sub hac forma, ut nos et successores nostros reverenter admittant ad excercendum visitacionis officium declinantes, ita quod officium nostrum, singulariter examinando personas super articulis consuetis, nobis excercere plene liceat, ut est moris, ac comperta que correccione digna fuerint, capitulum saltem cathedralis ecclesie contingencia, diocesano committamus reparanda modo debito vice nostra, qui super correccione subsecuta, infra certum tempus deputandum, nos fideliter certificet et informet, ut, quatenus convenire viderimus, approbemus seu reprobemus quod attenderimus ordinatum. Super hujusmodi, igitur, formis, seu alia honestiori, si se offerat, deliberare provide studeatis efficaciter et conferre; quod vobis videbitur per litteras patentes nobis plenius rescribentes.

et ex presentibus abesse oportuit aliquos ex certis causis, non potuimus deliberare in tanto negotio ad plenum, sicut forsitan expediret. Verumptamen, discrimina litium attendentes, videtur nobis quod, si in formam illam quam elegistis possetis descendere et cum adversariis convenire, licet aliquantulum diminuatur de jure vestro, satis posset tollerari pro bono pacis, et adhuc possetis mitigare verbum illud, "approbemus vel reprobemus quod attenderimus ordinatum," per adjectionem aliquam, prout poterit cum adversa parte sine graviori prejudicio conveniri. Duorum, enim, forsitan eis videbitur ut, si correcciones fecerint canonicas, vel ex justa causa penas mitigaverint, aut gratiam fecerint, quod totaliter ex approbatione vestra debeant dependere; dum, tamen, vobis liceat, post certum tempus prefigendum, per episcopi negligenciam, ad correcciones canonicas, vestro imponendas arbitrio, devenire. Quod, autem, vobis optulit magister Willelmus non videtur nobis conveniens sub ea forma, maxime quia videtur velle veritatem occultari, si non fiat inquisicio singularis, et quod per totam diocesim forma hujusmodi habeatur, ita quod cathedralis ecclesia nullam prerogativam habeat in hac parte. Intendit, enim, ita dividere ut vos laborem habeatis et paretis fructum episcopo laboris vestri. Preterea viderunt incompassibilia aliqua que proponit in eo quod dicit, "quivis in communi vel privatim, etc., visitans ipse corrigat et reformet"; et subsequenter subicit in eodem casu, "quod debeat episcopo committere corrigenda." Item, de procuracionibus per diocesim nullam facit mencionem, quasi vellet archiepiscopum duabus procuracionibus tantum fore contentum et propriis militare stipendiis, ut episcopus colligat que spargetis. Videtur, insuper, aliquibus quod, si via ex pretactis haberi non possit congrua consensu parcium, et petatur a vobis via compromissi vel amicabile compositionis amicorum communium interventu, propter maliciam temporis et [pro] bono pacis refutare non debetis, quin potius deliberare si vobis debeat hoc placere; proviso semper quod, pendente tractatu hujusmodi, non omittatur aliquid quod ad cause statum debeat pertinere, et hec teneantur secrecius, cum non expediat adversariis propalari. ARCHIDIACONATUS CLYVELANDIE DE ANNO SECUNDO.

393. 15 kal. Oct. (Sept. 17, 1280). Wyltone. Officiali archidiaconi Clyvelandie. Cum sacra testante sanccione fructus ecclesiastici illis merito fuerint subtrahendi, quibus ob demeritum ecclesiastica communio denegatur, ac Ricardus de Vescy, quem propter offensam, sicut alias vobis scripsimus, specificando excessus ejusdem, qui notorie se ostendunt, justicia excommunicatum publicavimus exigente, manifestam, ecclesiasticorum proventuum indignum se reddat percepcione eo ipso, donec, spiritu respiratus saniori, ad ecclesie unitatem, quam offendit, gregis atque communionem, quem vagans infideliter inficit, quod grave gerimus, satisfactione redire promeruerit de commissis. Devocioni vestre firmiter injungendo mandamus quatinus fructus ecclesie de Eskerik',¹ cujus rector Ricardus nominatur antedictus, solemniter sequestretis, fructus ipsos sub arto sequestro custodientes. ²[Sicut et vos de sequestro ipso respondere volumus, donec aliud in mandatis a nobis receperitis³ super istis.] Super hujusmodi execucione mandati, necnon prioris, cujus certificarium non recepimus sicut debuimus, si reverenter in execucione vos habuissetis ejusdem, absque more dispendio nos certificetis per vestras litteras patentes, harum seriem continentes.

394. 7 kal. Oct. (Sep. 25, 1280). Wylardeby. W., etc., officiali, ac ceteris ministris suis, benediccionis gratiam et salutis. Dignum fore decrevimus, in tranquillitatis et pacis odore, benemeritos confovere. Cum, igitur, magister Symon de Neville, rector ecclesie de Lengeby,⁴ jam infirmitate depressus et senio sit confractus, ipsum volentes favoris fructu et gracia prosequi speciali, nolumus quod ipsum decetero compellatis in synodis seu convocacionibus personaliter comparere, dumtamen in hujusmodi procuratorem ydoneum habeat loco sui.

³ Receperetis on both folios.

⁴ There is now no parish, or even place, with a similar name in the archdeaconry of Cleveland. The church of Lengeby or Lengebey was in the patronage of the abbot and convent of Whitby, and is identified by Canon Raine with Ingleby Greenhow (Archbishop Gray's Register, pp. 103, 309). This seems to be an error, as this latter church was not a rectory. There is no mention of any place resembling Lengeby in the Whitby chartulary. Slingsby, also called Slingsesby, which was a rectory, was in the patronage of Whitby.

Mandate to the official to sequestrate the fruits of the church of Esrick, held by Ric. de Vescy, excommunicated.

Mandate to the same not to compel the rector of Lengeby to attend synods.

395.¹ 4 kal. Jan. (Dec. 29), 1280. Thorpe. Admission and institution, with the consent of the rector, of William de Nortone, priest, to the vicarage of the church of Bozhale, on the presentation of John de Bozhale, knt. Bossall.

396. 5 kal. Feb. (Jan. 28, 1280-1). Cawode. Tercio priori et conventui de Novo burgo. Oblatam nobis electionem vestram de fratre Willelmo de Empingham, canonico vestro, nuper celebratam, inspeximus et per singula examinavimus diligenter, ut est moris. Sane, quia electionem vestram de fratre W. predicto tandem invenimus canonice celebratam, ac eundem fratrem W., in temporalibus providum, in spiritualibus circumspectum, in regulari disciplina instructum, ac virtutibus alias comperimus insignitum, congregationi vestre piis compacientes visceribus, electionem ipsam auctoritate ordinaria confirmantes eundem electum vestrum vobis et domui vestre paterno affectu prefecimus in priorem. Quocirca devocioni vestre mandamus quatinus ipsum priorem vestrum, sic per nos canonice institutum, reverenter admittentes, eidem decetero in omnibus juxta regulares traditiones obediendo intendere vestra studeat contemplacio salubriter profutura. Confirmation of the election of Will. of Empingham as prior of Newburgh, iniciata sinceritas¹ commissis vobis collegiis in presenti proficiat et posteris floridis pululare incrementis. Et quidem, dum conformem devocionem inprimere cupimus, deformitatis materiam necessarium censuimus amputare. Que, itaque, apud regulares deformitas probrosior, quam inter eos, qui ejusdem se asserunt religionis cultores, diversorum rituum singulares observancias confovere? Nunquam religiose condicioni congruit quod², dum pars professionis, licet diversorum cenobiorum canonici, nonnunquam conveniunt, in horis canonicalibus exsolvendis varia sentiunt, et hic suum, cum socium non intelligat, alterius abusu ridiculose proponit. Nunquam religiose y[n]demnitati convenit quod tam nuncupacione regulari, dum hic, videlicet, dominus, alius vero frater appellatur, quam in calciamentorum pompositate, dum equitant, acceptatur disparitas³ apud eos. Profecto quanta ex hiis ordini scandala proveniant, quantaque obprobria subsequantur, facilime (sic) attendere poterit oculus animi sagaciter intuentis. Horum proinde consideracio nostrum interpellat affectum ut nos, qui, hoc dudum attenta meditacione pensantes, operosum adhibuimus⁴ studium ut uniformitatem debitam quo ad premissas disparitates solide pararemus, non desistamus acceptis, set reddamus vos paterna monicione sollicitos quatinus in hoc generali capitulo vestro sic prospere agatis pro viribus, quod inter se vota vestra non discrepent, set vicaria promptitudine quasi in unum alveum congesta, ad reparacionem premisorum conveniant concorditer et subsistant. Usuum, igitur, diversitates, apud vos hactenus reprobe acceptatas, ad unicum usum compendiosum in hac vestra congregacione studiosius redigatis. Et quia usum ecclesie nostre Eboracensis communiter credimus⁵ convenire, usum ipsum in singulis conventibus vestris statuatis decetero observandum; alias disparitates quaslibet, quibus hucusque, non sine ordinis vestri vituperio, adhesistis, ad pares observancias per singula circumspeccius revocantes. Ex hoc, siquidem, ordinis reverencia augebitur, et concors adicietur familiaritas ac futuris temporibus placida inter fratres. Si qui, vero, huic commode provisioni nostre duxerint resistendum inprobe, nos, ad denunciacionem presidencium, quibus hoc firmiter injungimus, eorum conatus demeritos curabimus, disponente Domino, promptcius refrenare. The collation to all ecclesiastical benefices appertains to the Pope, especially to those of persons dying at Rome.

738. Licet ecclesiasticarum dignitatum, personatum, aliorumque beneficiorum ecclesiasticorum plenaria dispositio ad Romanum noscatur pontificem pertinere, ita quod solum ipse cum vacant potest provide conferre, verumque jus in ipsis tribuere vacaturis, collacionem, tamen, ecclesiarum, personatum, dignitatum, et beneficiorum, apud Sedem Apostolicam vacancium, specialius ceteris antiqua consuetudo Romanis pontificibus reservavit. Nos, itaque, laudabilem reputantes hujusmodi consuetudinem et eam auctoritate approbantes, ac nichilominus volentes ipsam inviolabiter observari, eadem auctoritate statuimus ut ecclesias, personatus, dignitates et beneficia, que apud Sedem Apostolicam deinceps vacare continget, aliquis preter Romanum pontificem, quacumque super hoc sit auctoritate munitus, sive jure ordinarie potestatis episcoporum electio, provisio, seu collatio ad eam pertineat, sive litteras super aliquorum provisionibus generales, vel etiam speciales, sub quacumque forma receperit, nisi ei sit super conferendis eisdem in Romana Curia vacantibus specialis et expressa ab ipso pontifice auctoritas attributa, conferre alicui vel aliquibus non presumat. Nos, enim, si secus actum fuerit vel attemptatum, illud irritum cernimus et inane.

Quocirca discrecioni vestre per apostolica scripta mandamus quatinus sentencias ipsas, sicut rationabiliter sunt prolatae, facias auctoritate nostra usque ad satisfaccionem condignam, appellacione remota, inviolabiliter observari. ¹ In No. 96 the Archbishop dates a document at Bishopthorpe on this day, probably erroneously.
² In the parish of Kirkham. Called Wyueton in the Register, and also formerly Witheton. A seat at one time of the Irish Butlers. ³Near Lancaster, called Bemund' in the Register.

⁴ Overkellat, where was a mansion and estate belonging to the archdeacon of Richmond and glebe of Bolton-le-Sands (Gale's Registrum Honoris de Richmond). ⁵Near Hornby.

⁶Probably an error for Grenhou, now Ingleby Greenhow, close to Busby, unless Grinton in Swaledale is intended. ⁷Ten miles N.W. of Rothbury.

APPENDIX IV.¹NOTICE OF THE DISCOVERY OF ARCHBISHOP WICKWANE'S TOMB AT PONTIGNY IN 1689.

Vous voyez, Messieurs, que l'église de Pontigny, toute minée qu'elle soit, est encore remplie de restes précieux sous tous les rapports. Je ne doute pas que de nouvelles recherches ne mettent à jour d'autres objets d'un égal intérêt ; tels, par exemple, que les vases sacrés et autres insignes ecclésiastiques enterrés dans le cercueil de Guillaume de Ludom, archevêque d'Yorck, du xiii^e siècle, qu'un procès-verbal de l'an 1669 constate exister dans le sanctuaire.

Ce procès-verbal, transcrit dans le troisième volume de l'histoire manuscrite de l'abbaye de Pontigny, qui est conservée dans l'église de ce lieu, porte : "le 8 avril, 1669, nous, frère Jacques de la Varande, prieur, sur l'avis qui nous a été donné par Nicolas Lejeune, maître tailleur de pierres et entrepreneur de bâtiments, demeurant à Tanlay-Émery, et travaillant en ce lieu, sur la nécessité qu'il y avait de faire lever une tombe dans le presbytère de nostre église, pour unir le pavé d'icelui, nous ayant fait voir au-dessous de ladite tombe qui étoit autrefois converte d'airain avant le pillage de la maison par les Huguenots, et qui est au milieu du presbytère, au-dessous de la lampe du grand autel, distant de la première marche dudit presbytère d'environ 9 ou 10 pieds, un cercueil de plomb de près de 2 pieds en carré et de 6 de long, enchassé dans un cercueil d'une seule pierre, au dedans duquel cercueil de plomb se sont trouvés les ossements d'un prélat, derrière le chef duquel est une lame de plomb où sont écrits ces mots : Hic jacet Guillelmus Eboracensis Archiepiscopus Angliæ primas, à côté dextre desdits ossements étoit un petit calice et patène d'argent doré au côté gauche, une crosse de cuivre doré et un anneau d'or qui étoit dans l'ossement du doigt, où est gravé à l'entour ave Maria gracia plena ; et autour du chef, de petites feuilles d'argent doré, qui ont servi d'ornements à la mitre, etc." La toute de la pièce n'indique pas qu'on ait rien retiré du tombeau.

printed at Auxerre in 1847. The writer of the article has confused Archbishop William Wickwane with his predecessor Archbishop Godfrey Ludham.
